Here the Sussex shore feels both geological and intimate — a passage carved by water, stone and memory. Wells transforms gathered materials into a terrain of resilience and quiet strength.

The work pulses outward like an internal bloom illuminated from within. Dense matter and luminous colour meet in a moment of release, balancing vulnerability with force.

Vic Wells builds mixed-media works in which lace, pebbles, gilding and gathered fragments become carriers of memory and repair. Her practice finds strength in vulnerability and beauty in what has been weathered, damaged or overlooked.
